

University of the Southwest is an independent, Christ-centered educational community in Hobbs, New Mexico, dedicated to developing men and women for a lifetime of servant leadership by emphasizing individual faith, responsibility, and initiative.

We are seeking applicants for adjunct faculty positions in the Colleges of Arts and Sciences in the Clinical Mental Health Counseling Program.

Requirements:

- Doctorate degree in Counselor Education from a CACREP-accredited doctoral program.
- Must possess a New Mexico professional counselor license, or be eligible to become licensed within the first year of teaching.
- Possess a variety of work-related skills (e.g., time management skills, collegiality, collaboration, task completion, strong written/oral/technology skills, etc.).
- Ability to multi-task, embrace change, organize, and prioritize.
- Possess effective interpersonal skills.
- Online teaching experience strongly preferred
- Preference for adjunct positions is given to residents of New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Georgia, Virginia, Idaho, and Oregon.

Review of applications or nominees is ongoing. University of the Southwest is an EEO employer. Women and minorities are encouraged to apply.

Interested applicants should send CV and cover letter in addition to the adjunct faculty application documents located on this web page <https://www.usw.edu/About-USW/Employment/Adjunct-Faculty-Application>
